In some senses a disappointing class with many wines demonstrating 'sameness' and nondescript fruit characters; possibly a function of high crop levels and young vines? Highly awarded wines showed tension, line and varietal 'sea spray' qualities.

Class 11B Comments:

a mixed bag and quite difficult to judge. a polarising malvasia, with loads of skins and funk and a touch of 'orangegate'. a very pretty moscato giallo, floral and sprited. some other wines missing the mark, but interesting to look at. our international judge was not so taken with this class.

Class 14A Comments:

A solid class of fresh wines as per the class conditions but no highlights except one gold that revealed bright, fresh fruit and balanced acidity to the fine tannins. Comment that many wines were either too rich and over-ripe or under-ripe with hard, green tannins. Watch cropping levels - too high or too low - needs a balance. A couple of wines out of class.

Class 24 Comments:

A class of mixed results with some wines over-ripe, lacking freshness plus too many are over-oaked, which the variety doesn't need plus tannins generally too grippy and astringent to the fruit. However, the varietal character came through on some wines - one judge commented not to make it like shiraz. Please persevere as this has potential.

Class 26 Comments:

Fascinating class to judge with really stimulating discussion considering there were only six wines. - the gold continued to grow in the glass and got better and better. The two silvers were really different ends of the spectrum: one riper darker fruits and oak supported, the other red fruits with attractive tannin interplay. There's a really strong future in Australia for this variety please keep making more.

Class 29 Comments:

The judges were impressed that every wine in the class looked like Nero d'Avola, considering the 1st commercial wine available in Aust was 2009. Nero d'Avola is getting a lot of interest from grapegrowers & winemakers, justifiably so, as it seems to suit various Australian regions. Winemakers need to be careful to respect the perfume and tannins, to allow expression of juicy, aromatic yet complex tarry wines, a really interesting class to judge WATCH THIS SPACE

Class 31 Comments:

Sulfide a bit of an issue in these wines in general. not being sulfide nazis- but there are some stinkers! very interesting top wines. The Nero very savoury, structured and super interesting, the sangiovese looking pure and lifted, lots of complexity and texture.
