Class 1A Comments:

Tricky to judge; the variety lends itself to fuller body expressions

Best wines have the generosity of the variety - texture and mouthfeel and blossom and ginger notes - but meet the brief of young and fresh

Class 2 Comments:

A slightly disappointing bracket overall with some of the wines lacking fruit, falling flat and displaying some winemaking issues. However, the good wines offered textural complexity and freshness, with real excitement found in some of the older examples.

Quite a strong bracket with a good standard overall and some standout wines with good intensity. The flight was indicative of Australia starting to find its feet with the variety: there were quite a few wines in this flight that relied on fruit, rather than the more Austrian example of Gruners built around a core of mineral and acidity.

Class 12A Comments:

A terrific vin-jaune style trumped a rather interesting class. Fragrance and finesse were rewarded. Some wines were fine, but dilute.

Class 13 Comments:

Aside from two entries that were out-of-class and an oxidised wine, this was a thrilling class to judge. Thoughtful winemaking has ensured the best wines are balanced with complex flavours and well-handled phenolics/tannins. And wines were fault-free. Bravo. Wine 10 would have won the trophy for this class - unanimous gold but alas, it was ineligible because it was not labelled. It is the epitome of Australian skin-contact wine - exceptional.

Class 32D Comments:

Good to see some brand new varietals coming through that make for good blending or stand alone wines. A small class makes it difficult to generalise, but it had an overall feeling of work in progress with exciting potential starting to be realised. Less oak would have allowed more to shine.

Class 33 Comments:

Solid class.

Nice diversity of styles- a mixture of rose petals and fragrant wines alongside heavier weighted wines. Texture phenolics OR mouthwatering acidity seem to be the key. Sulphide and grubby wines were evident, however overall use of sugar was in balance. There is an obvious connection between some of the varieties and rose.

Freshness critical for these styles

Fino should speak of energy, Amontillado speak of freshness/rancio balance
